NEW-YORK, July 9.

Letters from Quebec mention, that flour has been lately very dear in the whole province of Canada, owing to the scarcity of mills (there being only two in the whole country) and that the inhabitants had drawn up a memorial, intreating government to allow a small bounty for a limited time, in the making wheat into flour.

Congress, we are assured, have it in contemplation to make overtures to the British to commute the debt which they owe to the United States for Canada.

Congress have discharged all the troops belonging to the standing army, except about fifty men, who, we are told, are to form two small garrisons, one at West-Point, the other at Fort-Pitt.

July 12. We may expect some reformation with respect to the observance of the Sabbath in future, as we have been informed several were punished last week for this offence.

JULY 17.

Extract of a letter from a Virginia Delegate in Congress, to his Excellency the Governor, dated Annapolis, June 24, 1784.

"I have the pleasure to inform your Excellency, that a letter from Dr. Franklin, of the 31st of March last, announces the arrival of Col. Harmer, with the ratification of the Definitive Treaty. The exchange had not then taken place, but as the failure on our part arose from a concurrence of circumstances not to be avoided, our Ministers seem to apprehend no difficulty from its not arriving within the time stipulated.

"The Honorable Samuel Hardy, John Francis Mercer, James Monroe, Richard Henry Lee, and William Crayton, Esqrs. are elected to represent this Commonwealth in Congress for one year, from the first Monday in November next; the two last are in the room of Thomas Jefferson, Esq, appointed by the same authority a Commissioner to negotiate Indian Treaties."

Minutes of a meeting of the Committee of the West India Planters and Merchants, lately held in London.

Lord Penryn reported, that Lord Sydney had this morning informed him, that his Majesty's Ministers were aware of great jealousies being entertained concerning the allowance of American ships to be carriers of the produce of the sugar colonies; but that being very desirous to give immediate relief to the sugar colonies, they had the following propositions under their consideration, on which they wished to have the sentiments of this meeting, viz.

1. To permit the navigation between the American States and the sugar colonies in American vessels, not exceeding eighty tons burthen.
2. To limit the produce they should take back, by the value of that which they bought.
3. To limit the ports of the sugar colonies to one port in each of the Leeward Islands, and three in Jamaica.

The Committee have taken into their most serious consideration, the propositions above stated, are unanimously of the opinion, already by the planters and merchants repeatedly submitted to his Majesty's Ministers, that nothing but the unlimited permission of navigation by American ships, between the American dominions and the sugar Colonies, can permanently support the true interest of this country in that respect; and that, under proper regulations of such intercourse, the jealousy entertained thereof, would be wholly groundless. But they will at the same time, thankfully receive such degree of relief to their present urgent necessities, as his Majesty's Ministers think themselves authorized at the present moment, in prudence to give, and thereupon they submit—

1. Whether the tonnage may not be extended to one hundred tons, provided they be vessels having only one deck.

2. The Committee are not aware of any reason why British plantation produce should not be consumed in America, preferable to French; the limitation of tonnage certainly obviates jealousy about their bringing any such produce to Europe, such vessels being wholly unfit for that navigation; and the American demand is the only demand for a great part of the rum, without the sale of which, the British sugar colonies cannot subsist.

3. Whether there can be any objection to their admitting this navigation to any port in the sugar colonies, where a custom house is established.

another in the same island, especially to ports lying to windward of the port of importation, would in many instances, be at least equal to the freight from America, and would greatly enhance the price of so bulky a commodity to the consumer; and the Committee are not aware of any benefit that would result from the limitation proposed.

Resolved, That Lord Penryn be requested to wait upon Lord Sydney accordingly, and solicit that the relief which can at present be obtained, may be given as speedy as possible.

1. Whether the tonnage may not be extended to one hundred tons, provided they be vessels having only one deck.

2. The Committee are not aware of any reason why British plantation produce should not be consumed in America, preferable to French; the limitation of tonnage certainly obviates jealousy about their bringing any such produce to Europe, such vessels being wholly unfit for that navigation; and the American demand is the only demand for a great part of the rum, without the sale of which, the British sugar colonies cannot subsist.

3. Whether there can be any objection to their admitting this navigation to any port in the sugar colonies, where a custom house is established.

4. The freight of lumber from one port to another in the same island, especially to ports lying to windward of the port of importation, would in many instances, be at least equal to the freight from America, and would greatly enhance the price of so bulky a commodity to the consumer; and the Committee are not aware of any benefit that would result from the limitation proposed.

Resolved, That Lord Penryhn be requested to wait upon Lord Sydney accordingly, and solicit that the relief which can at present be obtained, may be given as speedy as possible.

L O N D O N, May 8.

The present is certainly the spring tide of success with Johnny Wilkes. Dr. Wilson of Bath has left him 20,000*l.* legacy; his late much beloved wife has bequeathed him the full enjoyment of her jointure during his life:—he is re-elected Member for Middlesex, and by a coalition the most honorable, is now become a welcome visitor at the Palace Royal!

Mr. West sends but few pictures to the exhibition this year. His subjects are all sacred: the principal picture is the divine legislator, Moses and the twelve tables: this is intended as a center piece for a cathedral. A portrait of the prophet Isaiah is to be placed on one side, and Jeremiah on the other. But Mr. West's most ingenious performance is a representation of the conducting angel leading the spirit of Prince Octavius to his brother Alfred!—his latter picture was painted for her Majesty.

The new operations of French finance which are now taking place, will put that monarchy on a truly formidable footing. The taille is to be made permanent for twenty years; Farmers General are to be totally abolished; the lands of the monasteries, &c. gradually seized, but under regulations for the public good; the clear addition to the revenue of the Crown by the whole of these manœuvres, will amount to not less than five millions sterling per annum. At the same time that France is making these prodigious efforts to put her revenue on a respectable footing; Great Britain sees her treasury in the management of a raw unfledged boy, whose giddy ambition has instigated him to a conduct which will long make his memory cursed in these kingdoms.

The French King has not declared the Port of Dunkirk open, because there is a secret article in the late convention between France and England to prevent it; but he has done what, without absolutely breaking the articles, is of an equal bad tendency to this country. Dunkirk is lately restored to all the privileges and immunities which it enjoyed in the year 1662, when it was sold by Charles II. to the French for £280,000*l.* All aliens, of what nature never, may trade in that city, and enjoy their religion. The port is enlarging, and putting in the best state of defence, on account of the number of shipping that are expected to frequent it. Smuggling, will therefore, we may expect, be carried on to a greater height than ever.

INTELLIGENCE EXTRAORDINARY.

Extract of a letter from Paris.

"English politics is at present the reigning subject of Parisian bon ton—not but we have our revolutions too—but not of Ministers or of Senators.

"A general revolution in fashion has taken place.

"Among the ladies, side curls have vanished, and as substitute, the locks are platted and doubled up. This is called the Medusean system, from its similarity of appearance to the tail of snakes, with which that Grecian witch is represented by painters.

"The zone is totally abolished, and the Persian sash has regained its former situation, and embraces the waist. Stays are exploded, and dimity boddices take their place.

"The petticoat shortens daily for the purpose of exhibiting the full shoe knot and embroidered clock, which runs half way up the leg, approaching the knee, from which a silk garter dangles to the ankle, with a silver or gold tassel.

"That things below may appear to the best advantage, the hoop is contrived to jerk up and down in continual motion, and from the elasticity of its form promises wonders!

"But where does the wonder lie? There is nothing new under the sun—there can be nothing new under the hoop—and, take away all the variety from the article, and her Ladyship of 1784 has no more to boast of than good old Eve of the year one.

"What is fashion?

"It depends entirely upon adjustment—and Eve could adjust her fig leaf to please Adam, with as much address as her Grace can adjust a brocade petticoat to please my Lord Duke.

"Take away the fig leaf—what is it?

"Take away the brocade petticoat—what is it?

"A woman!

Honi soit qui mal y pense.

"Good King Edward had it in his eye when he picked up Lady Salisbury's garter.

"And her Ladyship had it in her eye when she received it from his Majesty.

"The ladies all exclaim—fie!

"Be charitable, ye fair, and pray take the beams from your own eyes, before you censure your neighbours for having motes in theirs.

"The men have all become Jockies, but the women are still of opinion that they do not ride so well as the English.

"They cannot acquire the use of the whip and spur. Farewell."

L O N D O N, May 8.

The present is certainly the spring tide of success with Johnny Wilkes. Dr. Wilton of Bath has left him 20,000*l.* legacy; his late much beloved wife has bequeathed him the full enjoyment of her jointure during his life:—he is re-elected Member for Middlesex, and by a coalition the most honorable, is now become a welcome visitor at the Palace Royal!

Mr. West sends but few pictures to the exhibition this year. His subjects are all sacred: the principal picture is the divine legislator, Moses and the twelve tables: this is intended as a center piece for a cathedral. A portrait of the prophet Isaiah is to be placed on one side, and Jeremiah on the other. But Mr. West's most ingenious performance is a representation of the conducting angel leading the spirit of Prince Octavius to his brother Alfred!—his latter picture was painted for her Majesty.

The new operations of French finance which are now taking place, will put that monarchy on a truly formidable footing. The taille is to be made permanent for twenty years; Farmers General are to be totally abolished; the lands of the monasteries, &c. gradually seized, but under regulations for the public good; the clear addition to the revenue of the Crown by the whole of these manœuvres, will amount to not less than five millions sterling per annum. At the same time that France is making these prodigious efforts to put her revenue on a respectable footing; Great Britain sees her treasury in the management of a raw unfledged boy, whose giddy ambition has instigated him to a conduct which will long make his memory cursed in these kingdoms.

The French King has not declared the Port of Dunkirk open, because there is a secret article in the late convention between France and England to prevent it; but he has done what, without absolutely breaking the articles, is of an equal bad tendency to this country. Dunkirk is lately restored to all the privileges and immunities which it enjoyed in the year 1662, when it was sold by Charles II to the French for £280,000. All aliens, of what nature soever, may trade in that city, and enjoy it in religion. The port is enlarging, and putting in the best state of defence, on account of the number of shipping that are expected to frequent it. Smuggling, will therefore, we may expect, be carried on to a greater height than ever.

INTELLIGENCE EXTRAORDINARY.

Extract of a letter from Paris.

"English politics is at present the reigning subject of Parisian bon ton—not but we have our revolutions too—but not of Ministers or of senates.

"A general revolution in fashion has taken place.

"Among the ladies, side curls have vanished, and as substitute, the locks are plaited and doubled up. This is called the Medusean system, from its similarity of appearance to the tête of snakes, with which that Grecian witch is represented by painters.

"The zone is totally abolished, and the Persian sash has regained its former situation, and embraces the waist. Stays are exploded, and dimity boddices take their place.

"The petticoat shortens daily for the purpose of exhibiting the silk shoe knot and embroidered clock, which runs half way up the leg, approaching the knee, from which a silk garter dangles to the ankle, with a silver or gold tassel.

"That things below may appear to the best advantage, the hoop is contrived to jerk up and down in continual motion, and from the elasticity of its form promises wonders!

"But where does the wonder lie? There is nothing new under the sun—there can be nothing new under the hoop—and, take away all the variety from the outside, and her Ladyship of 1784 has no more to boast of than good old Eve of the year one.

"What is fashion?

"It depends entirely upon adjustment—and Eve could adjust her fig leaf to please Adam, with as much address as her Grace can adjust a brocade petticoat to please my Lord Duke.

"Take away the fig leaf—what is it?

"Take away the brocade petticoat—what is it?

"A woman!

Honi soit qui mal y pense.

"Good King Edward had it in his eye when he picked up Lady Salisbury's garter.

"And her Ladyship had it in her eye when she received it from his Majesty.

"The ladies all exclaim—fie!

"Be charitable, ye fair, and pray take the beams from your own eyes, before you censure your neighbours for having motes in theirs.

"The men have all become Jockies, but the women are still of opinion that they do not ride so well as the English.

"They cannot acquire the use of the whip and spur. Farewell."
